Rural Resettlement Target of New Deal's Foes

New 'Hindenburg'
Lands 107 Persons
Safely in Jersey

RA Is Buying Up 10 Million Acres of Untillable Land

Thousands of Families Are Being Transferred to Better Soil

RA Is Governing Nearly 600,000 Families

This is the first of five stories analyzing the wide field now covered by the Resettlement Administration (RA), the sprawling Washington federal agency attacked by many, and defended by many others,
and understood by few.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Practically any New Deal alphabet agency you can think of is confined to a single problem or a single phase of federal activity.

The Resettlement Administration,
under Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, which Senator Warren B. Hearnes of New Jersey calls an "experiment in paternalistic government" and which is investigated by Congress as a "staggering exception."

Only a year old, it is attacking a large number of national problems and is entering directly into the economic lives of millions of men, women, and children.

Waste of natural and human resources, unemployment, rural distress, reduction of relief rolls, urban and rural standards of living, low-cost housing for low-income groups—with their interferences of income redistribu-tion—farm debt, decentralization of industry, soil erosion, dust storms, reforestation, possibilities of the co-operative movement, stranded communities—all these come to a greater or lesser degree within the field of Resettlement.

Huge and Tiny Deals
RA deals with hundreds of thousands of families, millions of acres, and hundreds of millions of dollars. Bursted water pipes on a Minnesota subsistence homestead, the farm wife in Arkansas who never learned how to can string beans or huckleberries, the banker in Iowa who might be induced to cut the interest rate on his loan to a farmer, the mule that drops dead in a small Georgia cotton patch, drainage of a creek in Oklahoma—these indicate the diverse fields with which this agency is concerned.

Although much of the program is experimental and only small beginnings of what might be a 20 or 30-year process if carried on, Administrator Tugwell says it all adds up to an effort to "permanently strengthen the props under our economic and social structure."

The program's three major phases are:
1. Purchase of millions of acres of poor land and conversion to proper usage—parks, forests, grazing land, and wildlife conservation.
2. Transfer of thousands of families from bad land to good land and experiments in transferring urban

$5,100 in Interest Is Saved Farmers

Credit Administration Reviews Refinancing in Hempstead County

Refinancing debts through the Farm Credit Administration has saved Hempstead county farmers more than $5,100 a year on interest alone, according to figures from the central office of the Farm Credit Administration in Washington.

Over $120,000 of farm debts with interest rates that averaged 8.1 per cent a year have been refinanced with long-term mortgage loans carrying interest rates of 5 per cent a year or less.

The figures show that the local National Farm Loan Association has been a big factor in making these long-term mortgages available at low interest rates. The Association guarantees loans to the Federal land bank.

From May 1933, when the Farm Credit Administration was organized, to the end of last year, 90 Hempstead county farmers obtained $99,000 for the specific purpose of refinancing old debts.

The Federal Land Bank made 3 first mortgage loans and the Land Bank Commissioner 88 loans. Many of the Commissioner's loans were made on second mortgage security to farmers who also obtained first mortgage loans. Most land bank loans are endorsed by associations and advanced from funds obtained by selling farm loan bonds. The Commissioner lends from funds provided by the Federal Government.

As in the past, the Federal land banks are making loans only on first mortgage security, lending up to about one-half of the appraised normal value of the farm property. The Commissioner lends on second as well as first mortgage security in amounts up to 75 per cent of the value. The largest amount of a Commissioner loan to one farmer is $7,500.

An act of Congress last summer temporarily reduced interest rates on all Federal land bank loans—old and new.
Where land bank loans are made through National Farm Loan Associations, the rate is only 3 1/2 per cent for all interest payable in the year ending June 30, 1935, and 4 per cent a year in the two years following. This temporary reduction of interest rates on all Federal land bank loans is paid for by the Federal Government, which reimburses the banks for what otherwise would be a loss to them.

Due to favorable investment market conditions when the Federal land banks sold bonds recently, the banks can offer new loans, at present, at the interest rate of 4 per cent a year—the lowest at which they have ever lent money.

The statement from the Farm Credit Administration points out that a farmer who gets a Federal land bank loan through the local National Farm Loan Association while the 4 per cent interest rate lasts will not have to pay a higher rate during the entire term of the loan, which may be made for a period as long as 30-odd years.
Farmers who are paying higher interest rates on short-term farm mortgages, or other accumulated debts, may find it advantageous to refinance with a long-term loan while investment market conditions remain favorable, the statement adds.

One of the longest highway tunnels in the world, the Busk-Ivanhoe, near Leadville, Colorado, originally was constructed for railroad use.

REXFORD GUY TUGWELL, college professor on leave, farmer-in-absentia, former close associate of Secretary Wallace in the Department of Agriculture, now head of the Resettlement Administration, is the most interesting reman-ent active figure in the Roosevelt "Brain Trust." Because he has always been in the fore-front in announcing new policies or experiments, Tugwell has been bitterly attacked by conservatives who consider him visionary and impractical, or worse.
But he has hung on, and grown rather than shrunk in stature.

What the RA Series Is About

More than 16,000 people work for it at salaries averaging $1407 a year. Between 500,000 and 600,000 families will be its "clients" by midsummer. It is spending $275,000,000. It has offices in 27 Washington buildings and throughout the country. But it is less understood in Washington, and out of it, than any other government agency.

Headed by the administration's official "African Dodger," Rexford Guy Tugwell, the RA is now under an angry fire of opponents, who demand an investigation.

It is only a year old, but has had as high as 19,000 employees. It has bought millions of acres of poor land. It has had to work out the experiments of others, and begin its own. Some have gone quite sour, some promise definite benefits in the present and the future.

Strangest and least-known of all Washington agencies today, the RA and its various activities is going to be a focal point of attack and defense in the coming political campaign.

Rodney Dutcher's new series from Washington gives you a chance to inform your readers on this increasingly important activity of the federal government, a factor in the lives of millions, a factor in the pocketbook of all!

What the Five Stories Will Tell

Here is an outline of the five stories. They will be a revelation to your readers!

1. The setup of an amazing agency with 16,000 employees in 27 Washington buildings and 12 regions throughout the United States, and what it's trying to do.
2. What it means to buy up nearly 10,000,000 acres of poor land, move the people to better homes, and try to make something of the purchased land.
3. Subsidized Homesteads—a doorstep baby that RA is trying to raise into a useful citizen. "Three thousand families seeking a new way of living."
4. Suburban communities that didn't "just grow," but are designed as signposts for a bigger and better communities' civilization when we begin to build again.
5. Hilda Baber's mule, and the effort to get 3,000,000 farmers off relief rolls by giving them another chance to make their own way.

New Tax Bill to Face Denunciation

Democrats and Republicans, Alike, Felling
Away From It

WASHINGTON —(AP)—Rumors were rife Friday that members of a senate finance committee had revolted against the administration's new tax bill.

These rumors were supported by two facts.

Some of the Democratic members of the committee started a series of conferences seeking a substitute for President Roosevelt's proposed tax on un-distributed profits of corporations.

Senator Couzens of Michigan, ranking Republican member of the committee, on whom the administration had counted for support, announced flatly:

"I am against the bill."

Among the Democratic members of the committee, who were not yet prepared to talk for quotation, two alternative proposals were under consid-

Sherwood, Pulitzer Prize Playwright

"Idiot's Delight" Is Thrilling Satire on the Next
World War

By GEORGE TUCKER
Associated Press Correspondent

NEW YORK. —(AP)—A 40-year-old former cinema critic who thinks a playwright must be "something of a damn fool," has written the year's Pulitzer prize winning play.

He is Robert E. Sherwood, and his drama, inspired by war "false philosophies" who insist war is inevitable, is "Idiot's Delight," a satirical condemnation of men who think only in terms of munitions and marching feet.

Writing stage hits is not a novel experience to this tall, good-natured native of New Rochelle, N. Y. He has been provoking Broadway into unrestrained hilarity since "an unashamedly juvenile hero-worship of Hannibal" inspired him to write "The Road

Since then he has scored with such unqualified successes as "Reunion in

Landscape Work on Exhibit Sunday

Experiment Station Invites Visitors From 2 o'clock to 5

People throughout southwest Arkansas are invited to visit the grounds of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station Sunday afternoon, from 2 to 5, to see the large amount of landscape work which is being done.

The visit is strictly informal, and will not interfere with regular church activities. Visitors will be accommodated in small groups. There will be no lectures or demonstrations. Attendants, however, will be on hand to answer questions and point out the many varieties of ornamental trees, shrubs and flowers.

The Hope Garden club and similar organizations in this section are helping with the plan. Many people are expected to take advantage of this opportunity and plan their Sunday afternoon drive to the station.

M. V. Davis Given Burial at Emmet

Former Citizen of Iowa
Had Lived in Emmet
for Last 11 Years

Funeral services for M. V. Davis, 74, were held at 10 a. m. Wednesday at his home in Emmet with burial in the Emmet cemetery. Mr. Davis, ill for some time, succumbed Tuesday.

He had been a resident of Emmet 11 years. He settled there after coming to Arkansas from Des Moines, Iowa, his birth place.

He is survived by two daughters,
Reva Davis of Emmet, and Mrs. J. W.
Tatum of Oklahoma City; one sister, Mrs. B. C. Sexton of Oklahoma City, and a grand child, Lillie Bell Tatum of Oklahoma City.

Congress Dodging Long-Term Relief

Three Courses: U. S. Control, Return to States,

By BYRON PRICE
Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington

Any blow-by-blow account of the current congressional encounter over relief would show a large percentage of shadow-boxing.

A few hard ones have been struck, but in the main both Democrats and Republicans have attempted only cautious and tentative approaches to a subject they both dread and are anxious to be rid of with as little roughing as possible.

Almost without exception the members recognize that a new appropriation must be voted, but that it will be merely a temporary measure, postponing for the future the larger problem of a long-term policy toward unemployment.

7 Buildings Hit by County Storm

Ozan Section Struck—
Trees Uprooted on Hope-
Washington Road

A wind storm followed by torrential rain struck the Ozan area, 16 miles north of Hope at 4 a. m. Saturday, badly damaging four homes and three barns.

No one was killed nor seriously injured.

The farm home of T. H. Varnado, two and a half miles east of Ozan, was unroofed and lifted from its foundation. It was set down about 50 feet away. The Varnado family, trapped in the house, escaped injury.

Roofs of three negro houses were blown off. Walls of the houses collapsed, but as far as could be learned Saturday none of the negroes were seriously injured.

A barn owned by Clarence Lewis near the Varnado property crumbled and fell to the ground, pinning one of five mules beneath it. The mule was badly hurt.

Several trees along the Hope-Washington highway were uprooted.

Rain started falling in Hope at 4:30
a. m. There was no wind damage.
The Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment station reported a total of .44 inches of rainfall.

Spa Woman Says She Wed Karpis

Mrs. Grace Goldstein Asserts Ceremony Took Place in New York

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—Mrs. Alvin Karpis, the former Mrs. Grace Goldstein, 32, after an absence of about 10 days, returned to her home in the Hawthorne hotel Friday, surprising even her closest friends when, during an interview with newspaper men, she admitted that she had married the nation's former Public Enemy No. 1 last summer, and that, too, about a month after she had met him for the first time in Hot Springs.

Mrs. Karpis wished it understood that when the ceremony was performed she was under the impression that she was becoming the wife of Edward Wood, a gentleman of leisure, well able to support her. She said that the ceremony was performed in New York. Whether it took place in the metropolis or in a city in the Empire state, Mrs. Karpis declined to say.
Neither would she tell the name of the minister or official who performed the nuptial event.

During the interview, Mrs. Karpis was reluctant to go into details or to embellish her recital at certain periods of her story. She explained that she had been released by G-men less than 24 hours previous, and while she candidly stated that "they treated me great," she did not wish to burst into print with any statement that government officials might misconstrue, or to say anything that "would get under Hoover's collar."

She made it plain that she had no desire to have some soft-spoken representative of the Department of Justice mount the stairway in the Hat-terick hotel and invite her to go for another ride.

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—Premier Mus-

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The baby's mental development is especially significant, because the type of mind indicates the activities which the child may undertake. A child with a quick mind will be successful in doing things that require ability to think quickly.

Frequently such children will be lean, because their activity burns up a great deal of energy. Some people are likely to call this type of child nervous, while actually its reactions are a part of its character.

A child with a slow mind will be interested in activities that require concentration, but not speed. There are still other children who seem to care little about learning and whose minds are definitely superficial in character.

Parents should study the traits of their child and make the most of the kind of mind that it has.

By the age of five months, some babies will resist interference with their activities. This is an indication that training is necessary.

At the end of the sixth month, the baby will sit for a moment without support for its back, reach for things that it wants, and pound on the furniture.

When the baby gets old enough and strong enough to be playful, it needs even more attention than it did previously. During the seventh, eighth, and ninth months, the baby is able to express its satisfaction in various ways, and becomes more interested in sounds, so that it enjoys bells and rattles.

At the eighth month, the mother will suddenly discover that the baby will play peekaboo and can be taught to clap its hands.

This usually creates a great sensation in the home, but no nearly so great as that which occurs during the ninth month when the baby suddenly starts to crawl or to sit up alone, when it learns to wave "bye-bye" and to tell its family, by the tone of its voice, that it is pleased or satisfied.

A 10-month-old baby will recognize its own name, and, by the age of one year, other names as well.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

When I say "send for the doctor," I have only safety for the children in mind.

"I can't be sending for the doctor every time the children get sick," many mothers protest. Certainly they can't, and needn't. Head colds are as common as days in the week almost, and stomach upsets occur in the best of families. Mothers of today know about the seclusion, rest, diet and so on necessary to bring the sufferer back to normal.

Small wounds or cuts—the daily fate of the strenuous child—may also be dealt with at home with reasonable safety, provided the mother is adept at antiseptics and guards against the dangers of neglect.

Indeed, we all know that the parent's sensible judgment, plus experience, plus knowledge of the child's predisposition to certain general ailments must frequently answer in lieu of the physician.

Symptoms of Serious Ills

However, it does not hurt to remind ourselves that there must be a limit to the safety zone; that serious and extensive illness often be minimized by early professional attention; or that a major disease diagnosed in its early stages before it has become dangerous way, loses much of its power.

How, then, is the mother to know when to send for the doctor? A few suggestions may help.

First of all, fever. One cannot tell by feeling head or hands, so a clinical thermometer should be part of the first-aid equipment. Don't be afraid of it. It is easy to read and inexpensive to buy. True, the fever may be merely a gripe, but many serious diseases start out like gripe or a common sore throat.

Second, swelling joints or unaccountable pains, often called "growing pains." Sometimes they are, but the mother cannot tell whether it is "rheumatic fever" or not. Rheumatic fever inflames heart as well as joints, and at least it would be comforting to know, if it is nothing serious.

Loss of weight over a long period of time needs attention, too. Extra feeding often fails. In this case the child needs a lift other than home treatment. The real "fatigue" child, so-called, is the physician's problem.

Deceiving Little Ills

Difficulty in breathing may be an asthmatic condition. Persistent skin eruptions or eczema, may be due to allergies, or certain foods the child is sensitive to. Hives or headache, if chronic, may be caused by the same things. Such things are usually beyond home guess-work.

Local infections such as bad tonsils, or adenoids will undermine health. At any rate, advice should be welcomed.

All severe cuts, burns, scalds, dog-bites, and of course sprains, should have quick and professional attention. Ear ache or inflamed eyes, well, they speak for themselves. I should not take a chance on either.

This is hoping that none of these things will happen, and that most of you, dear mothers, will never need a doctor in the house. But a penny saved is a penny earned. And a disease caught early is not only dollars, but perhaps life itself, saved.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

High adventure and down-east folk-sines don't often go hand in hand. They do, however, in Robert Ferguson's "Harpocration" (Penny Press, $2.50), and the result is a marvelously interesting book for anyone who enjoys authentic stories of the sea.

Ferguson was a young Scotch-American who, in 1880, shipped out of New Bedford as harpooner on a whaling bark, for a four-year cruise. He kept a diary during the entire cruise, and the diary makes the book. It is by turns quaint and thrilling.

The thrills come in his accounts of his job—the killing of sperm whales, the capture of a rare combination of courage and skill to take a frail whaleboat up alongside one of these enormous brutes and hold it there while someone prodded the creature with a lance until it died.

Ferguson describes such actions over and over again, with a zest which indicates that he got an enormous kick out of his job.

The quaintness comes when Ferguson writes of shipboard life between whales. He prided himself as a cook; like a New England housewife, he tells how he baked bread, prepared roasts of ham or chicken, made pies—and compared recipes and culinary secrets with other horny-fisted seamen.

He was an expert seamstress, too, making a fine suit of clothes for the

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD.—The autographed cement-block-laying-down business is picking up. Within the next few months, stardom more dabs bearing the signatures and hand-and-foot-prints of stars are to be put into the rectangular entrance court of the Chinese Theater.

These will increase to 47 the famous collection started in 1927, when the red-and-gilt palace was the scene of practically all the plushy premieres.

All this means money and artistic satisfaction to Jean Klossner, a slim, graying Frenchman who is an ornamental cement contractor, and who has directed the impression-making of everybody from Pola Negri to Shirley Temple.

Klossner takes his job seriously. No ordinary materials go into these tablets, which are so dear to the hearts of tourists and the stars themselves. He imports cement from Belgium, treats it with "seven secret chemicals" to increase the plastic qualities, and works hours smoothing out the prints.

And all hands, from the captain on down, put in their spare time with the tablets.

All this adds up to an elaborately faithful picture of the whaling trade in its heyday. It is as valuable a record of America's sailing-ship era as Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast"—and fully as readable.

Tackling the Masked Marvel and signatures.

Two years ago he appeared on the stage and part of the show and took the prints of Jean Harlow, Jeanette MacDonald, and Maurice Chevalier. "No more public appearances," he says. "I was so nervous I nearly ruined everything."

There to Stay

The theater's celebrated autographs are not likely to be stolen, because the cement blocks are about 4x6 feet, weigh at least 1200 pounds, and are joined to their neighbors by steel reinforcements.

The largest, 6x7 feet, holds the hand and footprints, and names, of all four Marx Brothers (that was in the days of Zeppo, now an agent).

It isn't true that the marks of wandering stars are drilled out and the blocks filled in smoothly again. Witness the autographs of Constance and Norma Talmadge, Diana Wynyard, Tom Mix, Colleen Moore, Bill Hart, Bebe Daniels, Pola Negri, and Gloria Swanson.

It is true that the theater's box office, moved nearer to the street a few years ago, now covers the prints of Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, and the late Marie Dressler.

Unusual "Inscriptions"

All the blocks are inscribed to Sid Grauman, small, shock-haired, mildly eccentric manager of the theater, which is still called Grauman's Chinese because he was the original owner. He originated the hand-and-foot-print idea.

Lately, some innovations have been introduced into the memento-making. On Al Jolson's block recently were imprinted the famous mammy-song knees; he rolled up his trousers and kneled in the soft cement.

Bing Crosby has inscribed with a stylus the first few bars of his "Blue of the Night" theme song. Joe E. Brown got right down and bit the concrete after being assured that M. Klossner's "seven secret chemicals" weren't injurious.

A few stars have left warm little messages in their squares. Joan Crawford wrote: "May this cement our friendship." Shirley Temple inscribed, "Love to you all." Gloria Swanson drew an arrow-pointed heart.

Other stars represented whom I haven't mentioned, are Freddie Bartholomew, Ann Harding, Norma Shearer, Eddie Cantor, Janet Gaynor, Harold Lloyd, Marian Davies, and one director—auld Walsh.

meant it literally. It's simply uncananny how he can sniff currents. While the rest of us try to figure the thing out scientifically, Dr. Eckener just has a sixth sense. And if his intuition doesn't agree with our supposedly scientific data, he's bound to be right because we missed some important factor."

The doughy doctor has given abundant proof of personal courage. More than a decade ago one of the sudden storms that arise from time on Lake Constance occurred as one of his two daughters was swimming. Eckener broke from dozens of restraining hands and plunged into the waves but his efforts were in vain and his daughter drowned.

A Test of Courage

The supreme test of his courage came when, in 1923, he piloted the Graf Zeppelin for the first time to Lakehurst, N. J. A gale in mid-ocean ripped off the airship's stabilizing fin and Dr. Eckener had to assign his son Knut the dangerous task of repairing the fin while the airship continued to fly slowly.

"The toughest moment in my life," Eckener confided to a friend, "came when Knut had completed his hazardous job and had repaired the fin. To test out whether the fin would hold, I had to give orders for all four motors to go into full speed suddenly. It meant that the strong air current of these four motors might easily blow my son into the ocean. Yet it was my duty before God and the 20 passengers and 40 crew to issue the command. I did so. Fortunately my son was able to hold on."

Eckener's independence of mind has been demonstrated many times, and he always has gone his own way as his conscience dictated.

Denounced Versailles Treaty

At one of the dinners given in his honor in America in 1924, he denounced the Treaty of Versailles at a time when German diplomats could not afford to touch this hot iron.

German circles, especially in the air ministry, were surprised that Dr. Joseph Goebbels, German propaganda minister, undertook to "punish" Eckener for writing that he was an air captain and not a statesman or politician, and therefore didn't know enough about the implications of Hitler's action in remilitarizing the Rhineland to make a campaign statement. Letters poured in upon Dr. Eckener from all parts of the world, expressing astonishment at the ban on his name.

Sherwood Pulitzer

Vienna, in which Alfred Lunt and his wife, Lynn Fontanne, starred on Broadway and London, and "The Petrified Forest," last year's play which had Leslie Howard for its central character.

What Playwright Needs

"To be able to write a play, for performance in a theater," says Mr. Sherwood, "a man must be sensitive, imaginative, naive, glib, passionate; he must be something of an imbecile, something of a poet, something of a damn fool. He must be a chaser of wild geese as well as wild ducks."

Sherwood, who stands six feet four, is a Harvard man and Broadway's tallest playwright. He is married to the former Mary Brandon, of Indianapolis, and they have one daughter.

In his journalistic days Sherwood wrote screen reviews for Vanity Fair and also for Life. While employed by Vanity Fair one of his co-workers, Dorothy Parker, was dismissed after her frank critical opinion angered a Broadway manager. When Sherwood heard of this he resigned and went to Life, leaving behind one of its editors.

The real genius of "Idiot's Delight" probably date back to the World War, where Sherwood, as a member of Canada's famous Black Watch, got his information first hand. He was wounded at the battle of Amiens and gassed at the last battle of Arras, recovering sufficiently to be honorably discharged and shipped home.

The play itself, dedicated to and starring the Lunts is produced by the Theater Guild. Its action takes place in an Italian resort in the Alps, close to the Austrian border and concerns an American vaudeville star, who is touring "the Balkan Circuit" with a bevy of Broadway blondes; a German scientist who is perfecting a cancer cure; a munitions czar who stimulates business by urging huge armaments upon distrustful nations; a renegade Frenchman who has become militantly communist; and a glamorous pseudo-Russian princess with whom, years before, the American vaudeville hooper has experienced an affair.

As the curtain rises the "next world war" breaks out, and the characters, unable to cross the border, are tossed together for a night at the inn.

Action Speedy

Before the curtain falls on the final act, which is ostensibly 24 hours later, the Communist has been executed because of injudicious remarks; the scientist has renounced his cancer experiments and heads for Germany so that his talents may be directed towards germs that will kill enemy soldiers; the munitions magnate cunningly arranges for his Russian mistress to be "disposed of" because she has revealed her contempt for his love of carnage and the cold commercialism of his views; Italian planes have bombed Paris; and the vaudeville hooper has coaxed a confession from the Russian that it was she who knew him back in Omaha, Nebraska, years before.

Then comes reprisal from enraged France. A swarm of enemy planes swoops down on the huge airframe near the tavern. All have fled except the American and his reclaimed armament.

As the hotel is struck and the huge glass windows crash, the vaudeville hooper leaps to the piano. With a proximity. All the actresses have left very tiny prints indeed, and there is a dark suspicion that some of them were rather tight shoes for the foot-printing occasions. Greta Garbo's footprints are not found.

"Captain January," With Guy Kibbee, on Local Screen 3 Days

A famous story, becomes Shirley Temple's latest picture as the tiny, dimpled star returns in "Captain January," at the Saenger Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Adapted from the beloved tale by Laura E. Richards, the new picture is

A heart-tugging drama of a lovable little girl and a sweet, old sailor, set in a lighthouse on the rocky coast of Maine.

How Guy Kibbee loves and protects this tiny waif he had picked out of the sea years before, how he loses her to a vixenish old truant officer and eventually wins her back again is revealed in the fascinating plot of "Captain January."

Shirley performs a series of tinkling new steps, including a delightful novelty called "The Multiplication Table Dance," and sings three grand old songs. The hit of the three, all with music by Lew Pollack, is "The Right Someday to Love."

Slam Summerville, Buddy Ebsen, lovely June Lang and Jane Darwell are the principal supporting players in the picture.

New Tax Bill

One would seek to raise the $600,000,000 estimated as needed by increasing present corporation income taxes 5 per cent and subjecting all dividends to the normal income tax of four per cent.

The other would retain the present corporate tax structure and superimpose a surtax on undistributed profits, as a compromise between the present and proposed plans.

"I have been patiently studying the bill and listening to testimony at the hearings and I have reached the conclusion that the president has overestimated the extent of withholding of an unreasonable amount of earnings," Couzens said. "While I am in sympathy with getting at those fellows who unreasonably withhold earnings for tax avoidance purposes, I am unwilling to penalize other companies."

"Of the 100,000 corporations that are 97 per cent of the corporations of the country have 250 employees or less, and employ 48 per cent of all people in industry. So I think it is absurd to punish 97 per cent of the corporations, employing 48 per cent of the people, to get at some isolated cases."

Another weakness of the bill is that scores of rich companies would pay no taxes or less taxes than they now pay. There doesn't seem to be any sound reason for upsetting the whole tax structure.

"I have no explicit substitute plan, but I believe that a large number of the committee are in favor of cutting out all of the bill relating to the undistributed corporate earnings tax and writing a new bill in that respect. "One plan that is being discussed is to raise existing corporation income taxes to a flat 20 per cent rate, make dividends subject to the normal tax of 4 per cent, or possibly an increase to 6 per cent. The claim is made that this plan would raise $600,000,000."

They played children's games such as jumping the rope, blowing bubbles, and sang children's songs. The most appropriate dress was worn by Miss Ethel Turner with Miss Mary Arnold running a close second. Huckleberry Finn was characterized by Miss Evelyn Murphy who came to the party barefooted. Pink lemonade, stick candy and cookies were served as refreshments. Carnival hats were worn. A flashlight picture of the group was taken by Miss Rose Harrie. Those present were: Elizabeth Littlefield, Clara Mae Wilson, Johnnie Johnson, Mary Arnold, Mary Jones, Mary Cumbe, Edna Jones, Ethel Turner, Evelyn Murphy, Mildred Betts, Maurine Walker, Norma Lewis, Norma Gene Turner, Louise Price, Mildred Wylie, Mrs. Brown, Elizabeth Arnold, Rose Harrie. Guests were Mrs. W. T. Gorham, Miss Beryl Henry and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Graves.

Dr. Fife Preaches About Cain's Wife

Never Shake the Family Tree Too Hard, Evangelist Warns

In spite of impending rain, Dr. Clyde Fife drew another big house Friday night when he preached the top colorful sermon of his entire stay here, using for his text "And Cain went out from the presence of Jehovah and dwelt in the Land of Nod on the east of Eden." Gen. 4:16.

"If some men would pay more attention to their own wives and less to some other man's wife, there wouldn't be so much hell raised around the kitchen, and homes would be a lot better and happier," said Dr. Fife in beginning his sermon on "Where Did Cain Get That Woman?"

"It is a significant fact that the first man born of woman killed his brother in cold blood. Envy is a green-eyed monster which slays the fairest soul into which it ever entered unless quickly cast out. It ruined the heart of this fine little farmer boy who became the murderer of his own dear brother."

And in the evening God walked. God always walks. He walks in business reverses, in care of sick children, in the death of those near and dear. Oh, don't you ever doubt it, God walks. And when he calls you in on the carpet like he did Cain, brother, you had better talk because he knows the whole thing anyhow.

"But why any one should ever have started this fool question about Cain's wife is more than I can tell. It was gotten up by infidels to confuse and throw dust into the air. What difference is it who Cain's wife is?"

"There isn't one man out of a dozen here tonight who could tell on a bet the maiden name of his wife's mother or grand mother. He never even cared. All he wanted was the gal and since he has her and a house full of little children, he is worrying his head off about where to get little shoes, more dresses, hats and large amounts of bacon and beans. He has lost all interest in any woman's family tree. If he could shake this tree, he wouldn't, because he doesn't know how many in the outfit were hung for stealing horses on his side or her, either. So, never shake a family tree too hard, brother. Yet you want to shake Cain's tree and his wife's tree."

"To say that she was 'Adam's daughter-in-law' or the 'first lady of the land' doesn't spell a thing. But to give a serious answer to this question is my purpose here tonight and draw a spiritual lesson for the benefit of all."

"There were other people in the land. Else why should Cain tell God: 'Whose sindest he shall slay me?'" "Cain's wife was not necessarily a relation. Many commentators on this text contend that she was his sister. But the God who made the first man could suspend the horrors of procreation of those too closely akin."

"But she was probably no relation at all. Lamek, the 9th generation from Adam, died 23 years old when Adam died. He could have married Noah's sister—his xith great grand niece and reared a family of children by her. Cain could have married his ninth great grand niece and still have had two or three hundred years on his life before he would have attained to the age of Methuselah who died at the age of 969 years."

"Trouble and sin slow up a man's life. The five generations of Cain were probably not longer than three generations of Seth or the godly line. The name or street address of the woman Cain married is not given in the Bible for the following reasons: First, Suppose all the women of all time had been put into the Bible. No one could buy or find anything in it for the names of women. That would have ended Bible reading forever. Men are interested always in women but women certainly are not interested as a rule in each other. 'All women in the Bible are there for some mighty virtue or terrible sin. Cain's wife had neither. 'Another reason is that a man in those days never mentioned in polite society the name of his wife or daughter. She was considered no more than a dog or a beast of burden and, listen to me sister, when you roset your God you relegate your own self into that category."

"Who was Cain's wife? I will tell you who she is. She is right here in Hope. She may be right here in this house tonight. She is the first of a long line of little helpless women to bear the sins and shame of a low down, godless husband who ought to have died when he was a baby. She bears his children and his name and looks little Enoch in the face and remembers that that little boy's father was everything a man should never be. Oh, God, I feel sorry for a woman like that. If I should some time ever have sixteen daughters, I would rather every one of them would live and die the sweetest old maids God ever let live than to marry one man like that."

He will preach one of his finest sermons Sunday night, as many from Texarkana and out of town places are expected, although the service will last only one hour. Sunday is the big celebration in the revival for Mother's Day. "Bring your flowers and your mother and pin the flowers on her when we tell you," said Dr. Fife.

The revival closes in one more week. Next Friday night is the farewell sermon. Dr. Fife goes next to Washington, D. C.

Congress Dodging

concrete proposals for dealing with the jobless on a permanent basis. As for the years to come, they seem content to fall back on the hope that something will turn up.

Depression Is Over.
The trouble with such an attitude is that Mr. Roosevelt pointed out some weeks ago in his Baltimore speech, something already has turned up without even pointing the way to salvation.

Industrial activity has made long strides toward recovery. Some thoughtful economists are saying that so far as general indices are concerned, the depression is over. Yet the unemployment figures remain almost stationary. The facts have disproved one of the universal theories of these depression years—that if production could be restored to normal, the unemployment problem would evaporate. It is not this serious situation, however, or the remedy of it, that congress is debating. It is considering only what must be done at the moment to keep people from starving—a pressing matter, it is true, but hardly comparable to the question of what should be done to keep starvation from becoming chronic.

Neither party has produced more than sporadic suggestions about the future. Instead both sides talk of the past administration of relief, of the best method of spending what is to be spent during the next few months, of many things which can have little or no bearing on permanent policy.

Precedent Says, "No."
The truth is that even if either party could agree on a long-term program, political precedent would be against serious advocacy of it at the outset of a campaign. It is one of the bad breaks of national fortune that things should have come to their present state in an election year.

Only a few alternatives seem possible. One is to acknowledge that large-scale unemployment is inevitable, at least for years to come, and heavy federal appropriations therefore inescapable. Another is to work out an allotment of the burden, returning most of it to states and municipalities. A third is to undertake to spread employment by reviving some of the wage and hour regulations of NRA.

The political opposition which would develop against any one of these courses unquestionably would be strong and persistent. No taxpayer wants to be told he must go on paying for relief indefinitely, the states in general are dead set against taking back the responsibility, and every mention of NRA or anything resembling it stirs loud echoes of dissent.

So congress shadow-bores, making so great a stir over momentary aspects of the case that the real issue is forgotten. Some day, perhaps when this election is over, it must face the problem more squarely and take the consequences.

Sure Flop

Two film magnates were talking. "How'd the new pictures turn out, Julius?" asked the first. "Not so good," replied his companion. "I'm afraid it's only colossal."

Chaney Revival to Close Here Sunday

Special Service Has Run Three Weeks at Gospel Tabernacle

The Chaney Revival at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle comes to a close on Sunday having run for the past three weeks with splendid results almost nightly. Tremendous good has been accomplished and large crowds have attended throughout.

Friday night about 50 children under the direction of Mrs. Chaney and Mrs. Webb presented a program showing what they had learned during the meetings which have been held for them each day at 3 o'clock.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock the Rev. Mr. Chaney will speak on, "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit" and Sunday night the closing sermon of the campaign will be, "The Unpardonable Sin."

families to suburban communities. 3. Rehabilitation of hundreds of thousands of farmers by loans and farm and home management advice, thereby reducing relief rolls.

Farm Loans Big Item
For this program, Resettlement Administration has been allocated about $275,000,000 from the four-billion dollar work relief fund.

The largest single item of expenditure will be for loans to farmers who have so little that they can't borrow elsewhere. More than a million farm families have gone on relief in the last few years.

Resettlement Administration now 358 employees in Washington and 13,091 in the field, a total of 16,671. Average salary is $4,047 a year.

About 70,000 men, nearly all taken from relief rolls, were working on Resettlement projects March 15. The peak employment will be about 100,000, most of it in development of acquired submarginal land.

Administration Cost High
Criticism has been aroused by the fact that of $72,813,000 spent thus far, $16,089,371 has gone for administrative expenses. That's about 22 per cent, which has been cut down somewhat since March 15, but is still high enough to attract plenty of attention in case Senator Barbour persists in forcing an investigation.

This brings up the question of whether Twigg is an able administrator and ought to be in charge of spending at that money. Most of those officials closest to Twigg in RA and the Department of Agriculture insist that Twigg's administration has been at least as efficient as that of any other new agency in the New Deal.

Talk of "inefficiency" makes Twigg well and he defies anybody to prove it.

A year ago Resettlement inherited the Subistence Homesteads Division of the Department of Interior, the rural rehabilitation and land programs of FERA, and the land policy section of AAA.

Tries to Save "Duds"
Subistence homesteads, planned by Mrs. Roosevelt, Louis Howe, and other idealists, turned out to be a collection of experiments subject to all the ills of such pioneer ventures. They could best be classified as good, bad, awful, and terrible, and Twigg has been getting blame for their deficiencies. Resettlement killed nearly all those not yet in the construction stage and has been trying to improve the others.

Rural rehabilitation was in the hands of state corporations. Comptroller General McCarl ruled the corporations couldn't be used as instruments, and the business of taking over them and their assets has been proceeding slowly and painfully ever since. The staff cutting process led to many political squawks. Local pressure for housing projects following the slash in PWA's housing program was also heavy.

The land acquisition program has dragged partly because many titles to acreage were obscured. Weather has held up many of them and there was difficulty getting the right type of labor from WPA.

Improves Personnel
From the outset Resettlement suffered from a lack of experienced administrative personnel. Some of the earlier appointments to key positions were distinctly bad. Many mistakes have been repaired by Twigg and his staff.

The original administrative plan contemplated a program which would spend about $600,000,000. Much was done on that basis before the figure was cut in half.

Twigg hopes eventually to get the administrative cost down about 70 per cent. His field organization is divided into 12 regions, with a director and staff for each. Among the officials here are Assistant Administrator Will W. Alexander, working in economic reconstruction of marginal groups; Assistant Administrator Benham Baldwin, former assistant Secretary Wallace; General Counsel Lee Pressman, former assistant chief of AAA; Executive Assistant Grace E. Folke, former assistant to Twigg as undersecretary of agriculture; Director of Research, Walter J. Vinton, author, statistician, and housing expert; and Assistant Administrator Joseph L. Dailey, former circuit court judge in New Mexico.

How Funds Are Divided
RA has spent about $75,000,000, had net encumbrances of $138,000,000, and has an unencumbered operating balance of about $125,000,000.

It would like—but won't get—$500,000,000 more for continuing through the next fiscal year.

Available funds have been allocated as follows:

Administrative expenses	$22,000,000
Former subsistence homes	13,000,000
steads	13,000,000
Submarginal land purchase	44,120,000
Land use development projects	15,000,000
Suburban resettlement	31,000,000
Rural resettlement projects	33,500,000
Loans to individuals	23,000,000
Grants to individuals	14,000,000
Further loans and grants	30,000,000
Loans to co-operatives	5,000,000
Farm debt adjustment administration	2,000,000

Much of this money will be recovered. All projects eventually will be turned over to local and state ownership and those in private hands will pay local taxes.

Sooner or later the Resettlement Administration will become a part of the Department of Agriculture. Having no permanent home, its headquarters staff now is scattered through 27 different Washington buildings.

NEXT: Rural resettlement, and what's being done with submarginal land.

Genuine Ford Parts

Sometimes there is a tendency, because we have always advertised Genuine Ford Parts, to think that Genuine Ford Parts are higher in price than the ordinary automobile parts that you buy at any supply store. This is not true for this reason: Ford manufactures his parts in such great quantities that he can afford to sell cheaper than the ordinary small manufacturer. It will pay you to investigate and compare.

M'Larnin Beaten By Tony Canzoneri

Lightweight Champion Outpoints Irish Challenger in Thriller

NEW YORK—The luck of the Irish ran out Friday night when Jimmy McLarnin took the beating of his life from little Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight champion before a capacity crowd of 18,000 howling fans who paid $85,000 to see the 10-rounder in Madison Square Garden.

Tony nearly got himself stiffened in the first round and the customers were reaching for their hats and heading for the exits. But Canzoneri reeled out for the second and from then on he was the headman. He dropped a listless eight heat to Jim, but beat him soundly all the rest of the way.

Canzoneri nearly chilled McLarnin in the ninth—in fact, Jimmy came a lot closer to being carried off feet first than Tony had done in the opener.

Not since the Garden opened a decade ago have the clients received such a run for their money as Tony and Jim gave them. The frenzied ring-siders spent half the time standing on their chairs, women screamed hysterically and several fainted. Men threw their hats into the smoke-filled air and pummeled their neighbors excitedly as the wop from New Orleans and the Vancouver harp fought it out.

POSKANUCK! I NEVER HEARD OF IT! IF HE'S ANY FASTER ON HIS FINS THAN THIS SMELT, HE MUST RAISE A DUST WHEN HE RUNS WITH YOUR BAIT!

WHILE AN AGENT IN THE SECRET SERVICE OF THE CZAR, I HOOKED A MONSTER POSKANUCK IN THE HEADWATERS OF THE KANUSKI RIVER THAT EMPTIES INTO THE ARCTIC SEA.

HE HEADED DOWN STREAM, DRAGGING MY SKIFF IN HIS WAKE AT SUCH A PACE THAT BY HIGH NOON, I FOUND MYSELF IN AN ICE DRIFT NEAR THE MOUTH OF THE RIVER, SOME 1200 MILES FROM WHERE I SNAGGED HIM—

—SO OCCUPIED WAS I, IN KEEPING MY FRAIL CRAFT FROM BEING BASHED TO BITS AGAINST THE FLOATING ICE, THAT I FAILED TO NOTICE—

—A POLAR BEAR STOP A HUGE CAKE— SUDDENLY THE BOAT CAME TO A SHORT STOP— THE BEAR HAD FLIPPED THE POSKANUCK OUT OF THE WATER, AND SWALLOWED FISH, HOOK AND LINE—

LEAPING ONTO THE ICE, I DEFTLY THREW A LOOP, LARIAT FASHION, OVER THE BEAR'S HEAD AND, DRAWING THE LINE TAUT, I CHOKED HIM TO DEATH!

THE OLD TOPER! I'LL REDLIGHT HIM, BEFORE HE TELLS ME HOW HE SNARED A COVEY OF PINKFISH THAT PURSUED HIM ACROSS THE GOBI DESERT.

I THEN RETRIEVED MY TACKLE AND, BAITING IT WITH BEAR MEAT, I HOOKED ANOTHER POSKANUCK THAT WAS HEADED UP STREAM!

HAVING LOADED THE BEAR INTO MY SKIFF, I WAS TOWED BACK TO THE VILLAGE BEFORE NIGHTFALL!

THIS WORLD WASPS

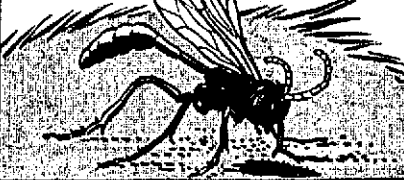

ONE SPECIES OF WASP IS KNOWN AS THE "TARANTULA HAWK." IT STINGS THE GIANT SPIDER... THUS PARALYZING IT... THEN DRAGS IT TO A HOLE, THRUSTS IT IN, DEPOSITS AN EGG UPON ITS BODY, AND COVERS IT UP. THE SPIDER SERVES AS FOOD FOR THE NEWLY-HATCHED YOUNG.

by WILKING FERGUSON

ALL WASPS ARE KNOWN EITHER AS SOCIAL OR SOLITARY! THOSE OF THE SOCIAL GROUP LIVE IN COMMUNITIES, IN A COMMON HABITATION, WHILE THE SOLITARY WASPS BUILD INDIVIDUAL NESTS.

SOME WASPS ARE CARPENTERS, AND BORE THEIR NESTS IN TREE TRUNKS... OTHERS ARE MINERS, AND DIG HOLES IN THE GROUND, IN WHICH TO LIVE.

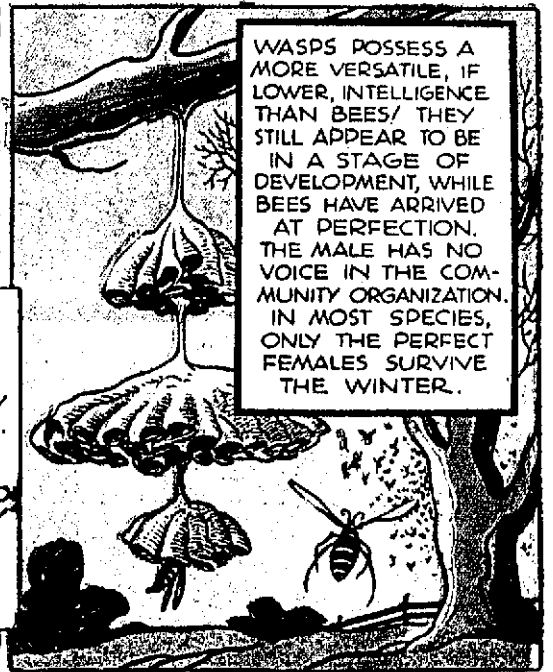

STILL OTHERS ARE MASONS, BUILDING HOMES OF MUD.

MOST INTERESTING OF ALL ARE THE PAPER WASPS, OR HORNETS, WHICH BUILD LARGE, GRAY HOMES OF PAPER... PAPER WHICH THE WASPS THEMSELVES HAVE MANUFACTURED FROM WOOD PULP. A SECTION OF THE WALL IS REMOVED, ABOVE, TO SHOW CELLED INTERIOR.

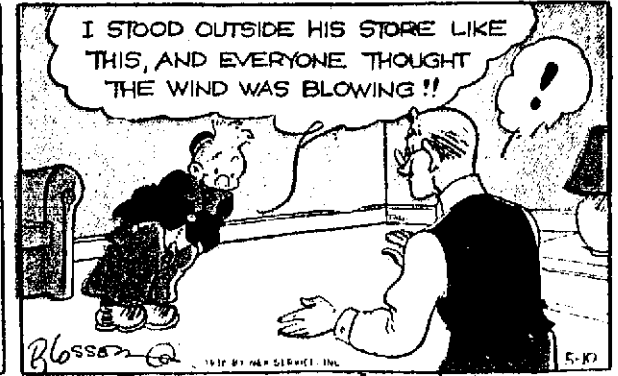

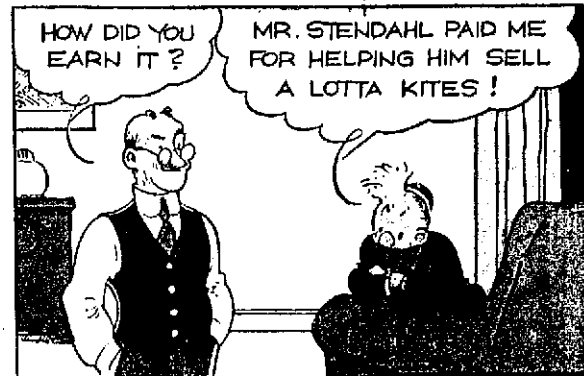

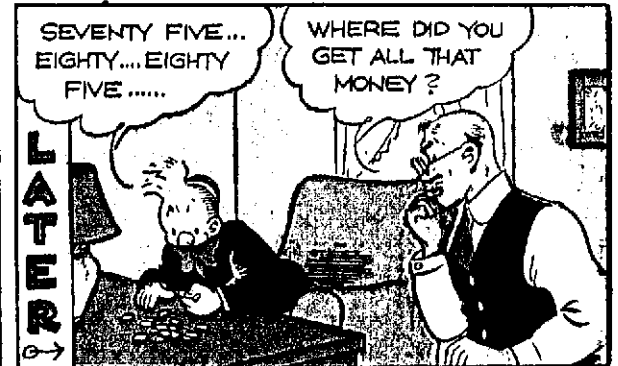

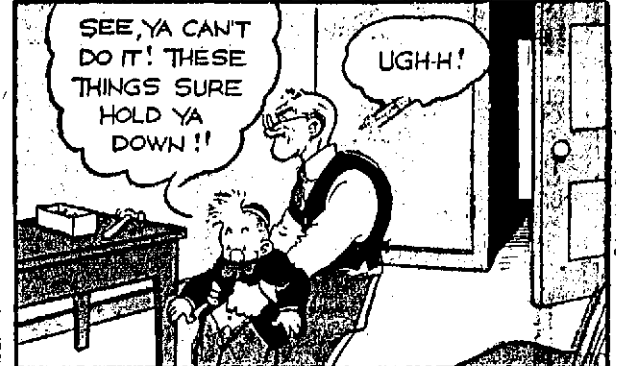

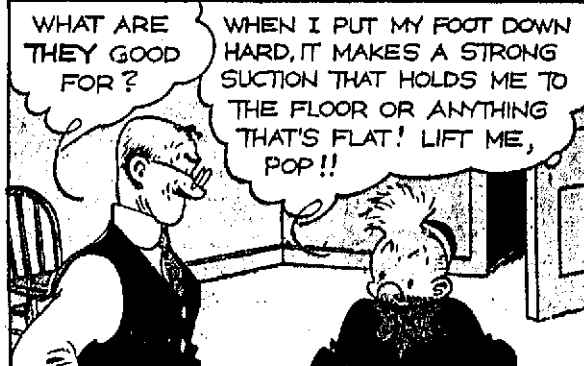

WASPS POSSESS A MORE VERSATILE, IF LOWER, INTELLIGENCE THAN BEES! THEY STILL APPEAR TO BE IN A STAGE OF DEVELOPMENT, WHILE BEES HAVE ARRIVED AT PERFECTION. THE MALE HAS NO VOICE IN THE COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION. IN MOST SPECIES, ONLY THE PERFECT FEMALES SURVIVE THE WINTER.
